3 FOREIGN STUDENTS — FROM AFRICA — HUNGARY AND IRAN — BUSY WITH COLLEGE ACTIVITIES HERE

Zainabu Roberts Returns — For Her Third Year — On Campus — Andre Toth and Mary Aghajanian — Both Are Art Majors — Now at Westmar

Westmar college has three foreign students, two coeds and one man, enrolled this school year. The three students are Zainabu Roberts, junior from Sierra Leone, West Africa; Andre Toth, sophomore from Budapest, Hungary, and Mary Aghajanian, freshman from Teheran, Iran.

Christian Education major Zainabu Roberts hails from Pendembu, a town of 800 people, most of whom are Moslem. Her grandmother, a nephew and niece are her only relatives now living.

She became a Christian while attending Hartford school at Moyamba, and then she attended the Bible school at Bo, before coming to Westmar in September 1957. She has done work in five languages, Hindi, Creole, Temne and French with 12 years of study in English.

Sophomore Andre Toth, an art major with the desire to be an archeologist, came to Westmar from a small college in Wilberforce, Ohio. In Hungary he graduated from high school and attended a movie technical school.

He and four friends escaped from Budapest, where his parents still reside, and came to the United States in 1957. In addition to English, Andre speaks Hungarian and French and comprehends some Russian.

Art major Mary Aghajanian is a freshman from Teheran, Iran, who is interested in becoming a commercial artist. She arrived in New York on Oct. 1, 1958, and studied English there for four months. Then she enrolled in the Delehanti institute and studied mechanical drafting.

The daughter of a Persian landowner, she has three sisters and two brothers. One brother and sister are presently in New York City.

Commenting on her impressions, Mary said that "the way of life is very easy and fortunate in the United States." She likes Americans because "they are very polite and friendly, and because they like to help foreigners."

The COUNTY MUTUAL:

Prompt Payment in Case of Loss

Although our members have a favorable loss record because of the County Mutual's loss prevention program, barns do burn—livestock is electrocuted—machinery does overturn. And when disaster comes, our policyholders need payment fast to stay in business. That's why we put such an emphasis on prompt claim service.

When loss occurs, the County Mutual secretary and agent—acting as claim adjusters—are often on the scene within hours. Experience and knowledge is then put to work in arriving at a just and equitable settlement. When the claim is completed, payment is promptly made from the County Mutual office a few miles away.

This neighborly service is just another reason why most farmers prefer their own County Mutual Insurance Association. If you are not now a member, or if you have added to your farm plant or farm inventory, better see your neighbor, the County Mutual agent, right away.
